I have had the pleasure of knowing and coaching Ryan over the past 3 years. It has been a pleasure to watch him develop as a baseball player and what stands out the most isn't just his ability as a player, but his work ethic, coachability and his commitment to becoming better everyday.

Ryan has a unique ability on the mound to be able to compete with the best. His presence and command when he is pitching is pretty unique. He is very good at changing arm angles, timing, and speeds. Keeping hitters off balance and consistently guessing. In my opinion, his baseball IQ is above average and it's evident that he spends a lot of time on his own studying the game and ways to get better.

As a person off the field, he does well in school, and the work ethic he has on the field carries over to the classroom. He is a great young man who comes from a great family who taught him how to be respectful and a hard worker. Great qualities to carry on the next level.

I truly believe he has what it takes to continue his career into the collegiate level and will be able to compete and have success. His ability to attack hitters, compete in big moments, and ability to keep growing as a player makes him a player with significant potential to succeed at the next level.
